

This is the run report for run no. 377

Date: 16 October, 2000

Hare: Dracula

Hounds: 11

Where: Parc de St-Cloud

Nice weather, no train strike, still no Royal Flush, but she'll be back soon? Frozen Cum appeared on the 13.37 looking like a lost visiting hasher?

No disasters for Dracula today! After a long absence, we were happy to be back hashing in our "local", the Parc de St-Cloud. Aquasex was most disappointed not to encounter the famous check-back just over the level crossing. Dracula managed to set the run going in a straight line all the way to the "view", but cleverly put check-backs every few hundred metres to fool everyone that we would turn somewhere. Unlikely, due to all the areas still fenced off. But hashers like to climb, and we did a silly up and down loop bit involving all our favourite manoeuvres, such as clambering over fallen trees and getting our feet soggy in the long grass. In fact it was a shoe cleaning run. Lucky we didn't bother "de-shiggying" our shoes since last week's run then. The Hash View wasn't the one at the end of the park, and just as well, since the mists of winter were swirling in and there were no giant coffee tables/Grande Arches to be seen. So what was the hash view? Was it the jamboree of scouts and brownies? Was it all the bonfires (into which Orange Slip nearly threw his witch)? Naah, of course not. It was the WC. Pretty hilarious really, since the forest is a WC.

Bon, onwards, in need of beer. Beer stop. Where was Sleeping Sex? Dracula despaired that she had got lost, on the easiest shortcut ever invented. Several hashers offered to go and find her, once they had finished their beers that is. Back into our forest, it was surprisingly unfamiliar after all that time. I mean, if not even Orange Slip recognises it??? A groaning climb up a steep bank, followed by a great OnIn, downhill all the way, and back to our lovely car park where Old Banger and Steel Stripper were waiting to provide us with beer, and lord it over us with their athletic prowess.

What did we think of the run?

The fountains didn't work (again!). Many people missed the WC/HV. Loops. Hills.
